

TOP 3 BLU-RAY DISCS TO WATCH

1

Piranha 3D
Bloodthirsty, tongue-in-cheek horror about killer fish. Not one to show Auntie Wendy over Christmas.

2

Alice in Wonderland
Tim Burton's retina-tickling 3D adventure sees a grown-up Alice hanging with Johnny Depp's mad hatter.

3

Inception
If you really can't face 3D, Nolan's brain-bending blockbuster is a proper eye-popper even in 2D.

If you can't beat 'em...
Sharp BD-HP90S
£380 | sharp.co.uk

Like it or not, 3D is here to stay. That means you've got two choices: you can either cover your eyes and moan about it like a Luddite trapped in Dixons, or you can embrace it like the geek that you are. Sharp's monolithic BD-HP90S should have you well on the way to multi-dimensional acceptance with its 3D Blu-ray skills, but if you're still not convinced, there's good old 2D Wi-Fi on board to stream stuff from your DLNA-equipped laptop to the TV. Now, are you sure you can't be tempted by one of Sharp's 60in 3DTVs? A snip at £3500..

WTF?

An Android landline

ET home phone
Binatone iHomePhone
£100 | binatonetelecom.com

With smartphones grabbing all the tech headlines, it's not surprising landlines have started to get a bit jealous. In a bid to claw back some column inches from their free-roaming friends, Binatone's cordless iHomePhone comes running everyone's favourite open-source smartphone OS, Android. With Wi-Fi on board, you can use its 2.8in screen to browse the web, check and send emails, download apps from the Android Market or, y'know, make phone calls. Brilliant. Even if it does sound like it was named by ET after a few beers.

Rumour mill

Netbooks running Google's Chrome OS will launch this month.

- The sequel to Fusion Garage's doomed JooJoo tablet is incoming, with Android replacing its shonky proprietary OS.
- Toshiba is prepping a Regza-branded TV phone with a 4in screen.
- Google's Nexus Two will launch at the same time as Android 3.0.
- The next iPhone will have the SIM card built in.
